

MASTER COURSE OUTLINE

A. CRJU 1135 Victimology

B. COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This course focuses on victims themselves. Most courses in criminology focus on the offenders and various criminal offenses, with only cursory examination of their victims. The term “victimology” generically refers to the study of victims—patterns, characteristics, and the various types of harm victims incur. The role of victims in the criminal justice system throughout history, the nature and extent of crime victimization, and victim characteristics will be studied. Also covered are the various types of costs experienced by victims, as well as the various legal rights of the victims. The myths of victim perception and various efforts to blame victims for their own victimization, as well as other factors that influence victimization (e.g., drugs and alcohol and the mass media) are included. Specific types of victims (e.g., sexual assault, domestic violence, homicide) and their treatment in the criminal justice system will be discussed.
